Prevent Escapes

COLUMBUS, Dec. 9 — (UP) — A 15-foot tunnel under the south wall of Ohio penitentiary was discovered by prison officials today while they were still investigating a bold attempt of six convicts to escape through a window, Monday evening.

The tunnel, within five feet of the surface on the front lawn of the penitentiary, was found by guards. It followed sewer pipes leading from the prison, according to Warden J. C. Woodard.

Covered with Planks
The tunnel started under the blocks G and H, where the hole was covered with planks.

Two men, unnamed, were under suspicion, officials said.

The effort to tunnel out of the prison by following sewer lines is not new, Warden Woodard said. "An attempt almost exactly like this one was uncovered about a year ago."

Alarmed over two escape plots in as many days, prison officials began a systematic search of the enclosure to learn if any further attempt to break away had been made.

The search disclosed a long, sub-

LAWYER TALKS WITH WALLY OF DIVORCE PLANS

CANNES, France, Dec. 9 — (UP) — Theodore Goddard, Mrs. Wallis Simpson's solicitor, consulted her today about her divorce.

Previously it had been insisted that Goddard was here only to discuss Mrs. Simpson's business affairs in London, such as the lease of her Cumberland terrace house, but Goddard told the United Press that they talked over the divorce during a meeting of 2 1/2 hours.

Goddard said that Dr. W. Douglas Kirkwood, who accompanied him in a hurried flight from London, was present only to attend him and not to see Mrs. Simpson.

Three Wills to Divide Estates Worth $37,000

Three wills, disposing of estates estimated at more than $37,000, were admitted to probate Tuesday by Judge J. W. Adkins of common pleas court, who acted as probate judge due to the illness of Judge C. C. Young.

Under the will of Morgan G. Jeffries, New Holland, a daughter, Grace Lamb, Dayton, and a son, Ralph Jeffries, Mt. Vernon, Ill., are bequeathed $500 each. The balance of the estate is left to the widow, Nancy B. Jeffries during her lifetime or so long as she remains his widow. At her death or remarriage the property is to be divided among Grace Lamb, Ralph Jeffries and Roy S. Peck, Clarksville. The widow and Roy S. Peck are named executors. The estate is estimated at $16,575.

Many bequests listed

Numerous bequests are made under the will of Hulda P. Wagner, N. Court street. They are: trustees of Forest cemetery, $200; Ruth and Bernice Row, Route 5, grand nieces, $500 each; Daniel Row, Columbus, grand nephew, $1,000; Thomas D. Emerson, city, and George H. Emerson, Route 2, nephews, $2,000 each; Minnie Seall, city, niece-by-law, and Carson Dresbach, Kingston, nephew of her husband, $1,000 each; Kenneth Emerson, Route 2, $2,000, and E. H. McGraw, N. Scioto street, $1,000. The remaining property is to be divided between Thomas D. Emerson and George H. Emerson. Household goods are bequeathed under a codicil to the will. The estate is estimated at $15,500.

W. C. Morris is executor.

The will of Loretta A. Moore, Perry township, directs her property be sold. One fifth is bequeathed to Curtis A. Moore, Columbus, and William E. Moore, Fort Wayne, Ind., grandchildren; another to her daughter, Martha E. Chenault, Greenfield; the third part to Bertus Carlton Bennett, son of the late Almeda M. Bennett, of Atlanta, a daughter; the fourth to a daughter, Donna Boll Smith, Kenton, and the last part to the children of J. W. Russ, Athens, a daughter. An estimate of $5,000 was placed on the estate.

Officers believe the girls went to Columbus.

They are Evelyn Boltenhouse, 14, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Boltenhouse, 212 E. Mill street, and Rosabelle Morris, 14, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Morris, Maplewood avenue.

Officers were told the girls attended school in the morning, went home for their lunches, and pretended they would return to school for the afternoon session. Instead they went to the home of Mrs. Lottie Welch, E. Main street, where the Boltenhouse girl had been employed. Mr. Boltenhouse said. He learned they had $5.

Descriptions of the girls were broadcast over the state highway patrol radio system. Miss Boltenhouse was described as five feet, four inches tall, weighing 100 pounds, has light brown hair, and was wearing a green coat with a black fur collar. Miss Morris was described as five feet, three inches tall, has blond curly hair, weighs about 125 pounds and was wearing a tan coat with a black fur collar.

LONDON, Dec. 9 — (UP) — Juan De La Cierva, inventor of the autogiro, Admiral Salomon Lindman, former prime minister of Sweden and 12 others were killed today when a KLM Dutch airliner crashed in a dense fog a mile from Croydon airport.

Six passengers were taken to the Purley hospital gravely injured. Four of them died. Only survivors of the 17 persons on board were Walter Schuback, a German passenger, the plane's radio operator, Jon Van Bommel, and the stewardess, a Miss Bongstam. She suffered only shock.

The passengers had left on the regular liner for Amsterdam at 8 a. m. which turned back on account of the fog.

PARIS, Dec. 9 — (UP) — France will demand an indemnity from whatever force — rebel or loyalist — shot down an embassy airplane at Guadalajara, Spain, yesterday, officials said today.

At the Quai D'Orsay it was said an investigation had been started and details as to the nationality of the airman responsible were sought.

"A protest through diplomatic channels will be the least action that will be taken," an official told the United Press, adding that France would demand an indemnity.

The airplane had been detached from the French airline service and placed at the disposal of the French ambassador to Spain.

It made a forced landing under fire and was damaged.

Among the passengers were Andre Chateau, special correspondent of the Havas agency, an international Red Cross doctor and several others not immediately identified. Those injured suffered broken legs and arms.

Spanish government forces accused rebel aviators of attacking the embassy plane while rebels said it was done by loyalist anti-aircraft batteries.

MURDER OF FRIEND CONFESSED BY GIRL

Hope Morgan, 25, College Graduate, Admits Shooting, Declaring She Was Grasped by Strange Desire to Kill Someone

EAST LANSING, Mich., Dec. 9 — (UP) — Hope Morgan, 25, college graduate, excused the slaying of her best friend today by claiming to be the victim of a "homicidal fixation."

Last night she and her college room-mate, her chum since high school days—Bessie Giltner, daughter of a dean of Michigan State college—sat in the living room of the Giltner home addressing invitations to Miss Giltner's wedding. Suddenly Miss Morgan produced a pistol and fired four shots into Miss Giltner's chest.

Police found Miss Morgan in the home of a friend, a few doors away. The .38 caliber pistol was in a filing cabinet. She admitted the slaying readily.

"Send me to an insane asylum," she cried, "and let me get on my feet."

For two years, she said, she had been driven by an inexorable desire to "kill somebody." For several days she had carried the pistol, the property of her father, and several times had submerged homicidal impulses with great effort. Last night, writing names on envelopes that inclosed invitations to Miss Giltner's wedding, the impulse was too strong.

Army Man Placed

Miss Giltner was to have married Captain David S. Babcock, a West Point graduate and R. O. T. C. instructor assigned to Michigan State college, Sunday. Miss Morgan was to have been a bride's maid and tonight she was to have given a shower for her chum.

Miss Morgan insisted to police that she loved Miss Giltner, that she had no feeling of animosity for her, that she was not in the least jealous of her success in love. She would have killed anyone who had been with her at the moment her fixation exercised its power over her, she insisted.

Miss Morgan, by invitation, arrived at the Giltner home at 8 p. m. She was feeling depressed and nervous, she confessed. She felt she had to tell someone about her fixation. She told Miss Giltner who comforted her. An hour later the impulse seized her. (Continued on Page Eight)

NATION BELIEVES KING TO RESIGN TO WED WALLY

Baldwin's Expected Speech, Telling of Decision, to be Heard Thursday

ACTION IS DISAPPOINTMENT

Edward's Mother, Others Certain He'll Abdicate

LONDON, Dec. 9 — (UP) — Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, with the country and the world waiting in painful suspense to hear confirmation or repudiation of a belief that King Edward VIII has decided to abdicate, told the House of Commons today that he could not make an announcement before tomorrow.

Baldwin expressed regret that he was not in a position to add anything to what he has already said.

The delay was a severe disappointment after it had been taken for granted until just before commons met that a statement would be forthcoming.

Mind Already Made

The situation has changed so often and with such rapidity during the crisis that hope was aroused in some circles that if the king already has made up his mind, as believed, further efforts would be made by the cabinet and royal family to change it.

When Baldwin arose in the House of Commons, Clement R. Attlee, labor leader, asked as he has every day for several days, whether the prime minister was in a position to add anything to Monday's statement.

Baldwin replied simply: "I regret that I am not in a position to add anything today but I hope to make a statement tomorrow."

Atlee then asked: "Will he (the prime minister) give us good hope in his statement tomorrow, because he will realize the anxiety which is continually increasing as long as this matter is not dealt with?"

Baldwin replied: "I can assure the right honorable gentleman and the house that no one knows that more than I do."

Baldwin appeared less strained and more composed than usual. Some members thought his expression showed signs of mental relief.

Other Asks Question

Frederick J. Bellenger, laborite, asked whether Baldwin is aware "of the grave financial inconvenience being caused by many subjects of this country by the delay in coming to a decision. Will he kindly suggest to his majesty the necessity of —"

Shouts or "order" cut him off but Baldwin replied: (Continued on Page Eight)

BRITISH, FRENCH SEEKING TO END SPANISH STRIFE

LONDON, Dec. 9 — (UP) — Great Britain and France have decided to try to arrange a joint appeal by five or six leading powers to the chiefs of the Madrid government and the Spanish nationalists to cease fighting, it was said today in a reliable quarter.

Britain took the initiative. It is intended that the appeal shall be made to Francisco Largo Caballero, Spanish premier, and Gen. Francisco Franco, nationalist dictator.

PARIS, Dec. 9 — (UP) — France will demand an indemnity from whatever force — rebel or loyalist — shot down an embassy airplane at Guadalajara, Spain, yesterday, officials said today.

At the Quai D'Orsay it was said an investigation had been started and details as to the nationality of the airman responsible were sought.

"A protest through diplomatic channels will be the least action that will be taken," an official told the United Press, adding that France would demand an indemnity.

The airplane had been detached from the French airline service and placed at the disposal of the French ambassador to Spain.

It made a forced landing under fire and was damaged.

Among the passengers were Andre Chateau, special correspondent of the Havas agency, an international Red Cross doctor and several others not immediately identified. Those injured suffered broken legs and arms.

Spanish government forces accused rebel aviators of attacking the embassy plane while rebels said it was done by loyalist anti-aircraft batteries.

Firemen Need More Toys As Holiday Approaches

Firemen have nearly completed work on the toys that have been donated so far and are ready for more.

Residents who have toys to donate are urged to take them to the department this week or notify firemen and they will call for them.

The father received word of the twins' arrival in jail where he has been since last April charged with murdering a neighbor while out hunting.

MURDER OF FRIEND

CONFESSED BY GIRL

Hope Morgan, 25, College Graduate, Admits Shooting, Declaring She Was Grasped by Strange Desire to Kill Someone

EAST LANSING, Mich., Dec. 9 — (UP) — Hope Morgan, 25, college graduate, excused the slaying of her best friend today by claiming to be the victim of a "homicidal fixation."

Last night she and her college room-mate, her chum since high school days—Bessie Giltner, daughter of a dean of Michigan State college—sat in the living room of the Giltner home addressing invitations to Miss Giltner's wedding. Suddenly Miss Morgan produced a pistol and fired four shots into Miss Giltner's chest.

Police found Miss Morgan in the home of a friend, a few doors away. The .38 caliber pistol was in a filing cabinet. She admitted the slaying readily.

"Send me to an insane asylum," she cried, "and let me get on my feet."

For two years, she said, she had been driven by an inexorable desire to "kill somebody." For several days she had carried the pistol, the property of her father, and several times had submerged homicidal impulses with great effort. Last night, writing names on envelopes that inclosed invitations to Miss Giltner's wedding, the impulse was too strong.

Army Man Fiancee

Miss Giltner was to have married Captain David S. Babcock, a West Point graduate and R. O. T. C. instructor assigned to Michigan State college, Sunday. Miss Morgan was to have been a bride's maid and tonight she was to have given a shower for her chum.

Miss Morgan insisted to police that she loved Miss Giltner, that she had no feeling of animosity for her, that she was not in the least jealous of her success in love. She would have killed anyone who had been with her at the moment her fixation exercised its power over her, she insisted.

Miss Morgan, by invitation, arrived at the Giltner home at 8 p. m. She was feeling depressed and nervous, she confessed. She felt she had to tell someone about her fixation. She told Miss Giltner who comforted her. An hour later the impulse seized her.

EDITH MAXWELL TRIED AGAIN FOR FATHER'S DEATH

WISE, Va., Dec. 9 — (UP) — Edith Maxwell, trim, soft-spoken school teacher, went to trial today, charged once again with the murder of her father, Trigg Maxwell. For a second time she was the central figure in a drama which has shaken this southwest Virginia mountain country.

Just 13 months from her first trial and conviction — set aside by Virginia's supreme court of appeals — the 22-year-old girl was called again to Wise county's gloomy old stone courthouse.

Townfolk and mountain residents crowded in to witness proceedings today before Judge Ezra T. Carter. Interested in Edith's fate, they were equally concerned over the attitude of outsiders toward the trial and toward Wise county.

NATION BELIEVES KING TO RESIGN TO WED WALLY

Baldwin's Expected Speech, Telling of Decision, to be Heard Thursday

ACTION IS DISAPPOINTMENT

Edward's Mother, Others Certain He'll Abdicate

LONDON, Dec. 9 — (UP) — Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, with the country and the world waiting in painful suspense to hear confirmation or repudiation of a belief that King Edward VIII has decided to abdicate, told the House of Commons today that he could not make an announcement before tomorrow.

Baldwin expressed regret that he was not in a position to add anything to what he has already said.

The delay was a severe disappointment after it had been taken for granted until just before commons met that a statement would be forthcoming.

Mind Already Made

The situation has changed so often and with such rapidity during the crisis that hope was aroused in some circles that if the king already has made up his mind, as believed, further efforts would be made by the cabinet and royal family to change it.

When Baldwin arose in the House of Commons, Clement R. Attlee, labor leader, asked as he has every day for several days, whether the prime minister was in a position to add anything to Monday's statement.

Baldwin replied simply: "I regret that I am not in a position to add anything today but I hope to make a statement tomorrow."

Atlee then asked: "Will he (the prime minister) give us good hope in his statement tomorrow, because he will realize the anxiety which is continually increasing as long as this matter is not dealt with?"

Baldwin replied: "I can assure the right honorable gentleman and the house that no one knows that more than I do."

Baldwin appeared less strained and more composed than usual. Some members thought his expression showed signs of mental relief.

Other Asks Question

Frederick J. Bellenger, laborite, asked whether Baldwin is aware "of the grave financial inconvenience being caused by many subjects of this country by the delay in coming to a decision. Will he kindly suggest to his majesty the necessity of —"

Shouts or "order, order" cut him off but Baldwin replied: (Continued on Page Eight)

BRITISH, FRENCH SEEKING TO END SPANISH STRIFE

LONDON, Dec. 9 — (UP) — Great Britain and France have decided to try to arrange a joint appeal by five or six leading powers to the chiefs of the Madrid government and the Spanish nationalists to cease fighting, it was said today in a reliable quarter.

Britain took the initiative. It is intended that the appeal shall be made to Francisco Largo Caballero, Spanish premier, and Gen. Francisco Franco, nationalist dictator.

JOB INSURANCE BILL TO BRING SENATE FIGHT

COLUMBUS, Dec. 9 — (UP) — Passage of an unemployment insurance bill by the special session of the general assembly to guarantee for Ohio retention of more than $12,000,000 in federal payroll taxes appeared to be as uncertain as ever today.

Some observers predicted either a deadlock between the two houses as to the form the bill should take or rejection by the senate of any kind of unemployment measure.

Despite predictions that the revised McIntyre bill has little chance of passing the house even if the senate approved it, the senate's special research committee resumed its efforts to whip into shape a bill to present to the upper house later today.

At a meeting of the committee yesterday labor spokesmen, in a last minute effort to push through a bill at least partially acceptable to labor, offered a compromise proposal by striking from the Boyd bill the merit rating clause and thus eliminating the major difference between the two bills.

FIRE ON TRUCK EXPLODES TEN TONS OF SHELLS

HAMILTON, Dec. 9 — (UP) — Ten tons of shotgun shells exploded and the truck in which they were being transported from the Kings Mills, O., plant of the du Pont Corp. to St. Louis was totally destroyed early today when fire spread from the truck's carburetor to the trailer load of shells.

The driver, Charles Allen, Terre Haute, Ind., fled before the explosion and was uninjured.

Allen told Sheriff John Schumacher of Butler county the carburetor caught fire three miles southwest of here. He tried to stop the fire with an extinguisher, he said, but was forced to flee when the flames crept toward the 20-foot trailer that contained 417 cases of 500 shells each.

Allen estimated damage at between $8,500 and $9,000. The truck was owned by the Great Central Trucking Co.

Exploded and unexploded shells were blown 50 feet from the truck. The truck's steel roof struck a telephone pole and set it afire. Hamilton firemen responded to Allen's call and put out the truck and pole fires.

EDWARD FACES LOSS OF MONEY IF HE RESIGNS

Family May Force Him to Give Up Cornwall, Other Sources of Income

MILLIONS NOW RECEIVED

Salary Annually is Fixed at $2,050,000

LONDON, Dec. 9 (UP)—Financial affairs occupied an important place today in problems facing King Edward.

If he abdicates to marry Mrs. Wallis Simpson, his financial status will be changed materially. It was reported the subject had been discussed at several meetings with Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin and Walter Monckton. His attorney general.

Edward, it was said, has shown concern about his wealth should he become plain "Mr. David Windsor," chiefly because his father, the late King George V, failed to bequeath him any of his estate. It was difficult to obtain a reliable estimate as to how much money the king could carry with him into private life. It had been assumed he would retain the incomes from the Duchy of Cornwall and the Duchy of Lancaster, amounting to about $1,000,000 a year, but several members of the royal family were said to be bitterly opposed to his retention of the former title and may attempt to take it from him if he abdicates.

Cornwall Richest

The Duchy of Cornwall is Edward's richest property, bringing in $530,000 a year. The Duchy of Lancaster provides him with $425,000 for which he does not have to account to the government. He made a compromise with Parliament last summer, agreeing to take only $100,000 from Cornwall and permitting the government to put the rest of the money into a "sinking fund."

None outside the royal family knows how much King George left. There is no probate and no inheritance tax for a king's will, but he was thrifty.

If Edward abdicates, he will lose instantly his yearly "salary" of $2,050,000. This is known as a civil list and includes a $550,000 privy purse, $650,000 for salaries, $764,000 to keep up the royal households and $66,000 for incidental.

In addition, the king controls a $47,000,000 fortune but he would have little chance of carrying any part of it into private life. It includes such items as a $5,000,000 collection of old paintings, $2,000,000 worth of books and documents, his father's $2,000,000 stamp collection, and the late Queen Alexandra's $3,000,000 worth of jewelry.

If Edward is forced to give up the Duchy of Cornwall, he probably would assume the title of Earl of Chester.

ANITA LOUISE TO PLAY HARP THURSDAY EVE

Bing Crosby to Present Young Screen Star at 10 o'clock

Anita Louise will let her fans judge for themselves Thursday night, what progress she is making in her hobby of playing the harp. She has promised Bing Crosby she will play the harp in the Music Hall, on the NBC red network at 10 p. m. (EST).

Miss Louise, one of Hollywood's most promising young actresses, has been playing the harp for several years during her spare time. She has been reluctant to exhibit her talents in public, however, and all her demonstrations have been for close friends visiting at her home. Her other hobbies are tennis, fencing and riding.

Other guests in the Music Hall next Thursday are Bruce Cabot, screen actor and Suzanne Fisher Fisher, Metropolitan Opera coloratura soprano.

HARLOW AND TAYLOR

Jean Harlow and Robert Taylor, MGM stars, form a new romantic team when they are starred in the Radio Theatre in "Madame Sans-Gene" on Monday, December 14, with Claude Rains in a featured role. Taylor makes his second appearance in Radio Theatre in less than two months when he plays opposite Jean Harlow in this drama of Paris in the days of Napoleon. It is Jean Harlow's Radio Theatre debut.

A famous character actor will also be featured in the production is Claude Rains, Warner Brothers player, who has the role of Napoleon. These three stars give Radio Theatre one of its greatest casts for the broadcast over the Columbia network at 9 p. m. (EST) with Cecil B. DeMille as producer.

Taylor plays the part of an army sergeant who becomes a Marshall of France with the success of Napoleon. Jean Harlow rises from laundress to duchess in her role as the sergeant's wife.

It's the story of Catherine Hubscher who runs a laundry in one of the poorer quarters of Paris during the French Revolution and falls in love with an army sergeant. When the sergeant becomes a Marshall of France they are accepted at Court. Catherine's outspoken manner makes enemies among the hangers-on and some of them sneer at her humble origin. Napoleon tries to get her husband to divorce her but even the great emperor is finally subdued by her frankness and charm.

President Quezon Proclaims State of Calamity in Philippine Islands

PROFITEERS ARE WARNED

10 Towns Believed Inundated by Cayagan's Waters

MANILA, P. I., Dec. 9 (UP)—Commonwealth President Manuel Quezon in a radio broadcast today proclaimed a state of calamity in the Philippines and invoked his full executive powers to cope with a catastrophic flood which may take a death toll of thousands.

Quezon proclaimed the emergency in a broadcast aboard the Empress of Japan while enroute to Hongkong. He warned that the government would penalize profiteers during the flood and rehabilitation period.

He announced the government would centralize its relief forces to aid the thousands made homeless in three provinces by the typhoon flooded Rio Grande Cayagan.

Ten Municipalities Blotted

The governor of Isabela province telegraphed Red Cross headquarters here that ten municipalities in his area are inundated and virtually, if not completely, destroyed.

"Conditions in the towns of Isabela province are chaotic," the governor said. "It is impossible to compile a list of casualties." He said that several hundred houses were torn from their foundations.

DR. EDDIE MONTGOMERY had been having a lot of trouble with a certain patient, whose checks seemed to bounce regardless of how quick the medico put them into the bank. One day a check returned marked "no funds", so the doctor went into action.

Contacting the patient on the telephone he said: "I don't like to mention it, but that check you gave me has come back."

Patient: "Well, that sure is funny, Doc, so has my lumbago."

WALLACE DISCLOSES PROVISIONS OF 1937 A. A. A. CONSERVATION PLAN

EFFORT TO SAVE SOIL STRESSED IN 'FED' SCHEME

Suggestions of Many Followed in New Program Expected to Please Most

TEN POINTS DISCUSSED

Depleting Bases to be Fixed by County Committees

The 1937 Agricultural Conservation program, similar in many respects to the 1936 program, was announced Wednesday by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace.

Like the 1936 plan, the new program offers payments to those farmers who meet specified conditions for shifting land from soil depleting crops to soil conserving crops, and for carrying out approved soil building practices. "Despite drought and other handicaps, the majority of farmers who took part in the 1936 conservation program approved its principles," Secretary Wallace said. "Hundreds of community and county meetings were held at which the growers discussed plans for next year. Many suggestions for program improvement and for simplifying administration were made. We considered all of them carefully and incorporated as many of them as could be well fitted into a national program for agriculture."

To Build Soil

"For the 1937 program, additional emphasis has been placed on soil building and more money will be available for soil building practices. Such practices, together with the shifting of acreage to soil-conserving crops on land previously devoted to soil-depleting crops, are essential to any sound plan for restoring soil fertility and preventing erosion."

"The new program should not only improve the soil but it also should protect the interests of consumers and help to preserve the economic gains which farmers have made during the last four years."

The fact that funds for the 1937 program are not yet available should be pointed out. The Congress, at the time the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act was passed in 1936, authorized an annual appropriation of $500,000,000 for carrying out a program under the act. The actual appropriation for 1937 remains to be made, however. The program we have drafted, therefore, is dependent upon the action of Congress."

Points Discussed

Salient points of the new plan include:

1. The program provides for expenditures not to exceed the $500,000,000 authorized to carry out the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act.
2. The plan of establishing soil depleting bases for farms has been continued. These bases will be used as a yardstick to measure diversion from soil depleting to soil conserving crops.
3. Payments for shifts from general depleting crops and cotton, tobacco, and peanuts will be continued in 1937, together with payments to sugar and rice producers who participate in the program.
4. Crops will be classified as soil conserving and soil depleting. These classifications follow those established in 1936 but some changes have been made in the light of experience gained in the actual operation of the program and conditions brought about by the 1936 drought.
5. The regional set-up for the administration of the program will be virtually the same as for 1936.
6. The administrative expenses of all County Agricultural Conservation Associations will be deducted from the payments to farmers in their respective counties.
7. This was true of the North Central, East Central and Western Regions in 1936 but county administrative expenses in the Southern and Northeast Regions were paid out of the general administrative funds in 1936.

Range Extended

The range program, which applied only to Western Region states in 1936, will be extended to include range lands in western parts of the Southern and North Central Region regions.

8. The allowance which growers of vegetables and fruits can earn through soil building practices will be increased for the 1937 program.

9. Any producer, no matter how small his farm, will have an opportunity to earn at least $20. The minimum allowance in the 1936 program was $10.

10. Producers with sizeable acreages in permanent pastures will

WASHINGTON — There will be a new bathtub in the American embassy in Moscow when the new ambassador, Joseph Davies and his bride of a year, the former Mrs. Marjorie Post Hutton, heiress to millions of the Post Cereal fortune, arrive to take possession.

But it won't be gold-plated. The new envoy is responsible for the statement that it will be just a plain, white enamel tub such as any American or Russian proletarian might be imagined bathing in on a Saturday night.

The tubs in Mrs. Davies' duplex Fifth avenue apartment in New York are of gold but no such display of wealth will be made in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

In New York, Yes—

Washington has wondered a bit how Mrs. Davies, one of the wealthiest women in the world and noted for her love of Arabian Night magnificence, will meet the problem of living in the Soviet capital.

Somehow Washington, where Mrs. Davies is well known, has been finding it hard to picture her in the Soviet setting, even though the American embassy in Moscow is a magnificent structure. Stories of her apartment, at Ninety-second street and Fifth avenue, New York, her estate at Palm Beach, Fla., her yacht, the Sea Cloud, her private car and fleet of Rolls Royces do not exactly fit into the general conception of life in a Socialist or Communist nation.

Lavish Wedding

Washington read with interest

the front page stories of Mrs. Davies' wedding a year ago, of the half dozen liveried servants busy keeping the wrinkles out of the red velvet carpet stretched from the apartment house door to the waiting limousine, of the tons of flowers, the lavish supper. Mrs. Davies is said to have spent a fortune refitting her yacht, the Sea Cloud, for her honeymoon journey to the south with Mr. Davies, Washington attorney.

To be sure, the Soviet embassy in Washington is an elaborate establishment. When the U. S. S. R. sent its first ambassador here the old Pullman mansion on Sixteenth street, with its 82 rooms, was elaborately refitted and furnished. And the entertaining done by the ambassador and Mme. Troyanovsky has been in keeping with the style of the mansion wherein they make their home.

Few Changes

The Davies in Moscow, however, do not plan to compete with the example set by the Troyanovskys here. Plans of the building leased as an embassy by the U. S. government were submitted and the only change suggested was the adding of another bathtub. The building was left partially furnished by the departing ambassador, William Bullitt, now envoy to France. The Davies will "take a few things" to make it home-like and will obtain other needed furnishings in Moscow.

The Sea Cloud will be left behind. But it might be sent over next summer. Mrs. Davies and the ambassador's young daughter, Emile Knight Davies, who will accompany her father to Moscow, are not buying any special clothes—"just some warm things, because you know those Russian winters."

Mrs. Davies is taking with her one thing that her reputation for lavish spending has somewhat overshadowed—her very real and sincere interest in all problems of human welfare, especially those pertaining to children.

Chance for Study

In Russia she will find opportunity for studying at close hand the interesting experiments the Soviets are making in this field. Her friends are confident she will bring back much useful information from which her many charities will benefit.

Ambassador Davies, an earnest supporter of President Roosevelt, was in his young days an equally ardent supporter of the late Senator Robert La Follette, fighting Progressive, of Wisconsin, his home state. Today he classifies himself as "a Roosevelt liberal."

total acreage in all soil depleting bases. The soil conserving bases for other regions is the average acreage of soil conserving crops over a representative period.

Rates of Payment

As in 1935, payments will be divided into two classes: Class 1 payments or diversion payments, and Class 2 payments or soil building payments.

The rate paid for diversion from the general soil-depleting base will average slightly less than the $10 average of 1936. The maximum acreage for which payment will be made for diversion from the general soil depleting base will remain unchanged. As in 1936, the rate will vary from farm to farm as the productivity of land varies.

Two-thirds of this payment will be made for shifts from soil depleting crops and one-third will be made for corresponding increases in the acreage of soil conserving crops, or will be added to the soil-building allowance.

The rates of payment for diversion for the special base crops is the same as in 1936, but the maximum amount of diversion for which payment will be made has been reduced in the case of several types of tobacco and for peanuts.

LUXURY PLANE LIKE ZEPPELIN SEEN AS NEAR

Speedy, Twenty-Passenger
Liner Called Tomorrow's
Ship by Engineers

TO CARRY 5,100 POUNDS

Smaller Wing Area Plan
Urged for Future Airplanes

HARTFORD Conn., Dec. 9 (UP)—Engineers of the United Aircraft Corp. today announced that they have developed a new type of airplane, which they believe will be the most important advance in aviation since the Zeppelin.

The new airplane, which is being called the "tomorrow's ship," will have a gross weight of 5,100 pounds, a cruising speed of 225 miles an hour and a range of 1,250 miles. It will be able to carry 20 passengers and 5,100 pounds of cargo.

It could carry a total payload of 5,100 pounds, including 20 passengers, luggage and half a ton of mail and express, and complete a coast-to-coast flight in 12 hours without using more than 60 percent of the rated power of the motors.

Range of 1,250 Miles
The airplane would have a gross weight of about 40,000 pounds, a range of 1,250 miles, a cruising speed of 225 miles an hour and a range of 1,250 miles.

To cut down air resistance, the engineers proposed all external projections, such as door handles, window ledges and wing ribs, be eliminated. By having the landing gear retractable, it was figured a 20 per cent power increase could be obtained.

Small Plane Cheaper
To engineers also envisaged the "future airplane," which would have a smaller wing area, smaller landing gear, lighter gross weight for the same payload, range and speed, and would cut operating costs from 25 to 35 per cent per ton mile of payload.

Regarding stratosphere flying, Mead and Dr. Hunsaker said, "The interior arrangement of the plane would include a cabin, a radio operator, a galley, dressing rooms for men and women, ten sections of two berths each, cargo space for crating would be tilting and heating systems. The main cabin space would be 10 feet wide and 40 feet long, and would include a radio operator's position level to below that of a Pullman car."

"Harem" Skirt Inspired by Persia

TIME WAS when a skirt was a skirt "for all the world," although maybe it was several yards around the bottom. But those times are, as the poets say, no more.

Skirts are slim as pencils, or they flare out in petal fashion; they are slit to expose a length of lovely limb, or they are almost as bouffant as in the days of hoops. Some are short—half way between ankle and knee—and some touch the floor, and others trail.

One of the latest stylings is the "harem" skirt. It had a brief flare about back—then flickered out.

It is being revived, and here is an outstanding example worn by Kay Francis, the "best dressed woman in Hollywood."

She is a living illustration of the Persian influence, with a plain beige frock which has a slim matching coat with contrasting threads of rose and blue. The draped skirt with the harem hem is noticeable. The bodice is gathered full, and a wide striped girdle gives color at the waistline. The turban worn back on the head carries out the Persian motif.

NOVICES RIVALS OF CAMERA MEN

TULSA, Okla. (UP)—Wide-spread use of highly-developed miniature cameras has cut deeply into the profits of professional photographers, delegates to the Oklahoma Professional Photographers Association declared in a convention here.

The miniature camera which came to this country four years ago from Germany has cost professional cameramen at least $25,000 in Oklahoma alone, it was estimated more than 100,000 of the cameras have been sold in this country since their introduction, according to figures made public at the convention.

Popularity of the small camera is attributed to its portability, simplicity of operation, uniformly good results and speed.

These cameras are simple to use and after a few lessons any intelligent person has little difficulty in getting good pictures, photographers agreed. Large short-focus lenses make for speedy action which gives fast pictures under conditions which make use of ordinary cameras impossible without flashlight powder or bulb.

Initial cost of the small camera is relatively high—better types ranging from $125 up—but operating cost is low in comparison.

Oil companies and pipe line companies have welcomed the cameras, buying them for their field men and saving the expense of professional photographers.

Delegates said nearly every camera sold actually means money from the professional's pockets, since "professional" appearing pictures can be produced by "amateurs" at less than cost.

TVA TO FIGHT INJUNCTION CASE IN LOWER COURT

Judge Gore to Preside in Nashville Court Dec. 11
as Argument Resumes

NEWTON BAKER COUNSEL
Against U. S. Project

NASHVILLE, Dec. 9 (UP)—In a dimly illuminated, poorly ventilated courtroom in the upper reaches of the Old Customs House here, former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker will argue an injunction suit before Federal Judge John J. Gore, seeking to halt all operations of the Tennessee Valley Authority's new program to build the TVA dam.

On Friday, Dec. 11, the former Wilson Deal "yardstick" program. The suit, which was filed last May 19, is now being argued in the lower courts. Baker is chief counsel for 19 major power companies, the Tennessee Valley Authority, and the New Deal "yardstick" program.

Months ago immediately after the Supreme Court ruling in the Ashwander case which partly upheld TVA, the 19 private power companies banded together and made a fresh assault on the entire triple-purpose TVA program. They filed one suit in Knoxville chancery court and an identical action in Northern Alabama district federal court at Birmingham. The latter suit later was withdrawn and the Knoxville suit subsequently was transferred to the Eastern Tennessee federal district court.

Meanwhile as complications and obstructions impeded settlement of the involved litigation, the power companies became concerned over the rapidly with which TVA expansion went forward. Hence, a petition was filed in Knoxville seeking to halt all power generating and transmission activities of the governmental agency pending settlement of the original suit. It is that injunction petition that is to be heard by Judge Gore Friday.

"The purpose of the (injunction) suit," the petitioners said at the time of filing, "is to enjoin the defendants from carrying on a proprietary business as a public utility or the generation, transmission, distribution and sale of electric power."

The voluminous brief pointed out that the issues presented therein are urgent as well as important.

"If the complainants are compelled to wait until all jurisdictional questions involving any of the defendants have been decided by a court of last resort, the complainants in the meantime will be completely at the mercy of the defendants' unlawful acts, which even now threaten the substantial and complete destruction of the plaintiffs' property before this can be heard upon its merits," the bill declared.

LEISURE FOR FIRE PASSING AWAY

STILLWATER, Okla. (UP)—Gore are the days of leisure simplicity when all a fireman had to do to put out a fire was to throw water on it.

A course for firemen will be offered at the Oklahoma A. & M. College. The proposed course was mapped by W. C. Themer, state fire marshal, and a group of fire chiefs and Philip S. Donnell, dean of engineering.

It includes English, mathematics as applied to industry, physics, mechanics and best mechanical drawing, shop woodwork, essentials of electricity, general chemistry, elementary hydraulics, chemistry of fire and other related courses.

Twice in the space of two weeks, TVA was defeated through the medium of dismissal motions. The first motion asked dismissal of the suit on jurisdictional grounds. After considering the TVA contention that it could not be sued outside its legal residence in Northern Alabama—so fixed by congress—Judge Gore decided he had jurisdiction to hear the suit in Tennessee.

TVA then sought abandonment of the suit on grounds that it failed to raise a new issue; was unclear, and cited no specific grievances. Judge Gore likewise overruled that motion, instructing TVA counsel to file a motion for clarification if the suit appeared unclear, but not to seek dismissal for that reason.

Following disposition of the injunction suit, Judge Gore is expected to decide on an early date hearing of the constitutionality suit on its merits. His ultimate decision on TVA's constitutionality inevitably will be carried on appeal to the Circuit Court at Cincinnati, and thence on certiorari to the U. S. Supreme Court for final review—probably not before next fall.

LUXURY PLANE LIKE ZEPPELIN SEEN AS NEAR

Speedy, Twenty-Passenger Liner Called Tomorrow's Ship by Engineers

TO CARRY 5,100 POUNDS

Smaller Wing Area Plan Urged for Future Airplanes

"Harem" Skirt
Inspired by Persia

NOVICES RIVALS OF CAMERA MEN

HARTFORD Conn., Dec. 9 (UP) — Huge, commodious airlines, with luxurious overnight accommodations for 20 passengers, and capable of cruising at 225 miles an hour were predicted for the near future today by two leading aviation engineers.

The experts were George J. Mead, vice-president and chief engineer of the United Aircraft Corp., and Dr. J. C. Hunsaker, head of mechanical and aeronautical engineering at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

What they have termed "tomorrow's airplane," will have the exterior appearance of a Zeppelin with an all-metal fuselage, a landing gear completely retractable into the wings, and of low-wing monoplane type, engine by four two-row, radial, air-cooled motors of between 5,000 and 4,000 horsepower.

It could carry a total payload of 5,100 pounds, including 20 passengers, luggage and half a ton of mail and express, and complete a coast-to-coast flight over night without using more than 50 percent of the rated power of the motors.

Range of 1,250 Miles

The airplane would have a gross weight of about 40,000 pounds, a range of 1,250 miles, a cruising speed of 225 miles an hour at 30,000 feet and could fly easily at 15,000 feet even with one engine dead.

To cut down air resistance, the engineers proposed all external projections, such as door handles, window ledges and even rivet heads, be eliminated. By having the landing gear retractable, it was figured a 20 per cent power increase for cruising would result.

The interior arrangement of the plane would include, in the nose of the ship for the pilots and radio operator; a gallery, dressing room for men and women, ten sections of two berths each, cargo space beneath the floor, and ventilating and heating systems. The main-cabin space would be 10 feet wide and 40 feet long. Sound insulation would reduce the noise level to below that of a Pullman car.

Small Plane Cheaper

Engineers also envisaged the "future airplane," which would have a smaller wing area, smaller power plant, lighter gross weight for the same payload, range and speed, and would cut operating costs from 25 to 18 cents per ton mile of payload.

Regarding stratosphere flying, Mead and Dr. Hunsaker said they believed the upper lanes practically only for nonstop ocean or transcontinental flights.

"Otherwise," they said, "an unproportion of the flight time would be spent in climbing to and descending from the operating altitude."

TVA TO FIGHT INJUNCTION CASE IN LOWER COURT

Judge Gore to Preside in Nashville Court Dec. 11 as Argument Resumes

NEWTON BAKER COUNSEL

19 Power Companies Combine Against U. S. Project

NASHVILLE, Dec. 9 (UP) — In a daily illuminated, poorly ventilated courtroom in the upper reaches of the old Customs House here, former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker soon will argue an injunction suit before Federal Judge John J. Gore, seeking to halt operations of the Tennessee Valley Authority until such time as the U. S. Supreme Court may rule on the validity of the New Deal "yardstick" program.

On Friday, Dec. 11, the former Wilson cabinet member will match his wits against the keen legal mind of John Lord O'Brien, New York attorney in what will perhaps be the final skirmish in advance of the actual hearing on the act's constitutionality in the lower courts.

Baker is chief counsel for 19 major power companies that are seeking in a united effort to overthrow the New Deal's power program by challenging its constitutionality. O'Brien was retained as a special counsel for TVA at the outset of the litigation.

Suits Filed Months Ago

Months ago immediately after the Supreme Court ruling in the Ashwander case which partly upheld TVA, the 19 private power companies banded together and made a fresh assault on the triple-purpose TVA program. They filed one suit in Knoxville chancery court and an identical action in Northern Alabama district federal court at Birmingham. The latter suit later was withdrawn and the Knoxville suit subsequently was transferred to the Eastern Tennessee federal district court.

Meanwhile as complications and obstructing impediments settled down on the merits of the case, the involved litigation, the power companies became concerned over the rapidly with which TVA exacted its rights on the merits. Hence a petition was filed in Knoxville, seeking to halt all power generating and transmission activities of the government agency pending settlement of the original suit. It is that injunction petition that is to be heard by Judge Gore Friday.

Back to Enjoin TVA

"The purpose of the (injunction) suit," the petitioners said at the time of filing, "is to enjoin the defendants from carrying on a proprietary business as a public utility or the generation, transmission, distribution and sale of electric power."

The voluminous brief pointed out that the issues presented therein are urgent as well as important.

"If the complainants are compelled to wait until all jurisdictional questions involving any the orical doubt have been decided by a court of last resort, the complainants in the meantime will be completely at the mercy of the defendants' unlawful acts, which even now threaten the substantial if not complete destruction of the plaintiffs' property before this can be heard upon its merits," the petitioners said.

Although almost as much water has flowed over the dam in a figurative sense, as has sloshed over the half-acre dam of the tremendous TVA systems, it now appears that an end of the litigation is in sight. Motion picture counter-motions, postponements and answers have been filed and argued since the suit was filed last May. The attorneys now agree that the long-awaited action on the outright constitutionality question doubtless will be the next step after the injunction suit is ended.

Because of two semi-victories in recent skirmishes, power interests are more optimistic than at any time since the 8-1 Ashwander decision wrecked their initial attempt to void TVA.

Twice in the space of two weeks, TVA was defeated through the medium of dismissal motions. The first motion asked dismissal of the suit on jurisdictional grounds. After considering the TVA contention that it could not be sued out of its legal residence in Northern Alabama — so fixed by congress — Judge Gore decided he had jurisdiction to hear the suit in Tennessee.

TVA then sought abandonment of the suit on grounds that it failed to raise a new issue; was unclean and cited no specific grievances. Judge Gore likewise overruled that motion, instructing the TVA to file a motion for clarification if the suit appeared unclear, but not to seek dismissal for that reason.

Following disposition of the injunction suit, Judge Gore is expected to set an early date for hearing of the constitutional question on its merits. Hence a decision on TVA's constitutionality inevitably will be carried on appeal to the Circuit Court at Cincinnati, and thence on certiorari to the U. S. Supreme Court for final review — probably not before next fall.

LEISURE TIME FOR FIREMEN PASSING AWAY

STILLWATER, Okla. (UP) — Gone are the days of beautiful simplicity when all a fireman had to do to put out a fire was to throw water on it.

A course for firemen will be offered at the Oklahoma A. & M. College. The proposed course was mapped by W. C. Thelmer, state fire marshal, a half dozen fire chiefs and Philip S. Donnell, dean of engineering.

It includes English, mathematics as applied to industry, physics, mechanics and heat, mechanical drawing, shop work, titles of electricity, general science, elementary hydro-chemistry of fire and other related courses.

"YOU CAN'T PRINT THAT"

THE British press, in the solemn words of the London Times, discovers it may no longer ignore "the grave constitutional issue to be raised by a conflict between the King's intentions and the advice of his Ministers." That is the backdoor approach made by England's editors to the far-flung consequences of King Edward's friendship for the American Mrs. Simpson. For weeks the international romance has occupied columns of space in American newspapers. But a self-imposed editorial censorship kept the news from the British public.

Because of that policy the menacing crisis in government found the people shaken and bewildered. Generally speaking, they were wholly unprepared for the tremendous events of the last week, the ultimatums, the conferences, the uncertainty. There had been no public intimation of Edward's affection for Mrs. Simpson until it had progressed to the point where he contemplated marriage in defiance of church, Cabinet and tradition.

Even the news of Mrs. Simpson's divorce was played down in the few newspapers that had the temerity to refer to it. But, censorship or no, church and Cabinet could not deter the King. Then came cryptic sermons, clumsily dragged into editorial comment on extraneous matters, admonishing Edward to remember his kingly duty. The increasing frequency of these veiled references in the last week by press and pulpit started a train of conflicting rumor and confusing speculation. Then the denouement.

Now, London dispatches relate, England is in turmoil. Anxious crowds fill Downing Street and throng about Buckingham Palace, shocked by rumors their popular monarch may abdicate. Yet the august Times congratulates the British press for having "so long and so wisely" ignored the "American publicity." But were the censors wise in embalming fact? If they were, so are ostriches.

STILL TIME TO SHOP EARLY

THE Christmas season is actually here. Skeptics may be convinced simply by visiting the centre of the city. They will find the streets hung with greens and brilliantly illuminated. Stores are filled with far-sighted shoppers, also with great stocks of gifts. The Christmas spirit, in fact, is to be found everywhere.

It is pertinent, under the circumstances, to remind the shopping public that time flies and that there are only 13 shopping days before Christmas. It is also in order to call attention to the fact that all indications show that Christmas trade will be unusually brisk. This means that early shoppers will have many advantages in the way of comfortable transaction of business and the ability to make selections from undepleted stocks.

World At A Glance

—By—
Charles P. Stewart

When the British newspapers belatedly pulled the cork out of the story of the King Edward VIII-Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson romance they did it to the accompaniment of a veritable explosion. They had kept the affair bottled up so long that it was more than effervescent.

In the United States, of course, it was anything but bottled. However, it was kept hushed up at its source with such an attempt, though an unsuccessful one, at secrecy that one scarcely knew how much was fact, how much was rumor and how much was pure fiction.

A FALSE IDEA

The British dailies, weeklies and other periodicals undoubtedly have stirred a considerable proportion of imagination into their accounts of developments.

For example one London weekly published a report that the Washington state department had expressed its opposition to a matrimonial union between Edward and Mrs. Simpson. Think of the state department as butting into such a situation!

But the English rank-and-file probably believed it implicitly.

The truth is that the London government did consult the sub-governments of the British dominions on the subject. Now the average Englishman never has quite realized that the United States is not a British dominion. Therefore, in their opinion, the United States was inadvertently included, along with Canada, Australia et cetera, among the dependencies queried by Downing street relative to the Windsor-Simpson complication.

IN ENGLAND, TOO

We have, on American newspapers, what are known as "rewrite men," who produce, from fragmentary (or no) dispatches, a lot of stuff that they think will interest the public, whether or not they are sure of it.

Under another name they have 'em in England also.

From all indications they have been very busy there since a free hand has been given to them.

BRITISH COMPLAINT

Incidentally, many English newspapers blame the American press for creating something very like a scandal out of what, in English journalists' opinion, might have been "shushed" otherwise.

They did "shush" it locally until, they complain, the American overflow inundated them.

"GLAMOROUS" OVERWORKED

Not realizing what the Windsor-Simpson affair was developing into, I didn't begin to count, at first, the number of times that Mrs. Simpson was due to be referred to in American newspapers as "glamorous".

I've tallied up to 923, but that's no fair total.

Mrs. S. is described as a "girl" every few editions. She is past 40.

NOT IN "WHO'S WHO"

As we all know, Mrs. S. was a Baltimore girl and a frequent visitor in Washington.

Old acquaintances of hers (so they say) are to be found in both cities. But her relatives? Call on one of them—and beware of a charge from a double-barreled shotgun.

Mrs. S. was omitted from the last British "Who's Who?"

Well, says American journalist comment, "that's better than being omitted from the telephone book". Score one for Mrs. Simpson.

DANGEROUS MENTION

The late King George is mentioned as having been a model of decorum.

A dozen years ago an English journalist of the name of Mylius got a thumping term at hard labor for charging an early affair between George (then only a princeling) and a daughter of the then Admiral Seymour.

Maybe Mylius had it coming to him.

Still, there is a lot of guff in these relationships.

SECURITY JOB CAUSES CONFLICT

WASHINGTON — Launching the selective draft during the World War was child's play compared to the brain-busting job of getting the old age pension system of the Social Security Act under way.

The monumental task heaped headaches on the Post Office and Treasury Departments as well as on the Social Security Board.

The postal service had the responsibility of distributing and collecting the 26,000,000 worker and employer blanks. The quiet efficiency and dispatch with which this huge order was filled gave no inkling of the weeks of work and midnight oil burning that went into the preparations.

With the distribution and gathering of the forms the Post Office's job was finished. But that of the Treasury and Social Security Board had just started.

They also had been wrestling for weeks with administrative details. And the deliberations between them frequently were acrid.

Nominally, control of the old age pension system is vested in the Social Security Board. But the law empowers the Treasury to collect the assessments, although the Social Security Board does the actual issuing of the pension checks.

DIVERGENT OBJECTIVES

This split administrative responsibility inevitably led to clashes. It soon developed that the Treasury and the Board approached the problem from sharply divergent points of view.

Concerned only with the collection of the payments, the Treasury wanted to keep "paper work" to a minimum. But the Board, contending that it needed full information in order to administer the law accurately and fairly, insisted on comprehensive reports.

The two agencies wrangled over the issue for weeks, getting nowhere. Finally Secretary Morgenthau broke the deadlock. He called in his subordinates, told them to give the Board its way.

"Let the Board decide what it wants done," was his edict. "Administering this law is the Board's responsibility. If we force our views on them we will get the blame if anything goes wrong."

This sound move cleared the supercharged atmosphere. From then on the two agencies worked in better harmony.

usually brisk. This means that early shoppers will have many advantages in the way of comfortable transaction of business and the ability to make selections from undepleted stocks.

Furthermore, early shopping helps the shopkeeper and his employees, as well as the customer, and early mailing aids the burdened mailman. Things can be mailed in advance, marked "Do not open until Christmas." The more such mailings the less the final rush and the fewer the delayed deliveries.

"Do your Christmas shopping early" is the first Christmas motto to be heeded. From all appearances, Christmas shopping is getting under way at a pace that will provide plenty of company for those who do it now.

Hazards of Poisoning by Dry Cleaning Fluids

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
FOR THOSE housewives or bachelors who do their own dry cleaning, it is wise to sound a note of warning in the winter time, when the process is so likely to occur with the window down.

Dr. Clendening

The organic substances, in contrast with the familiar cleansing soap and water, that act as solvents of stains and detergents for dirt, are all capable of producing poisoning under certain circumstances.

Most of the cleaning fluids that are used for fabrics contain one or more of the following liquids: carbon tetrachloride, chloroform, trichloroethylene, ethylene dichloride, propylene dichloride, benzene, toluene, ether, alcohol and petroleum distillates of various degrees of volatility.

Effects Produced
Aside from the fire hazard involved, these substances, when inhaled, can produce several effects. Naturally, as might be expected from solvents of grease, they have the effect of removing oil from the skin, causing it to become chafed and cracked, particularly around the finger nails. Gasoline containing tetra-ethyl lead can produce lead poisoning by absorption through the skin.

The inhalation of fumes of many of these substances will affect the lungs, sometimes the kidneys, liver and nervous system.

Another hazard is the possibility of children swallowing some of the fluid if a bottle is left within their reach. I have before me a report of 65 cases of kerosene poisoning in children admitted to one hospital within two years.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS

M. J.: "I am very much annoyed by the excessive perspiration of the palms of my hands."

Answer: This does not indicate any special disease, but simply a nervous vasomotor trouble. At times it can be relieved by soaking the hands in a solution of a teaspoon of formalin to a quart of water, morning and evening, for three or four minutes.

F. C. R.: "I have a bad habit of biting my finger nails and my finger nails are very brittle, thin and pliable. They chip easily and splinter, especially at the corners."

Answer: Possibly your trouble is due to a chronic infection of the nail bed. These troubles are frequently relieved by the use of the X-ray, and other means which are routine problems in the office of any physician.

M. M.: "Will you please tell me whether it is harmful to sleep in a room that has no cellar under it? The room is warm and dry, and has four windows."

Answer: It is perfectly healthful to sleep in such a room.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening now are obtainable by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene," and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

PAST

The clocks are chiming in my heart
Their cobweb chime;
Old murmurings of days that die,
The sob of things a-drifting by,
The clocks are chiming in my heart!

The stars have twinkled, and gone out—
Fair candles blown!
The hot desires burn low, and wan
Those ash fires, that flamed anon,
The stars have twinkled, and gone out.

The BLOODHOUNDS Bay

By WALTER S. MASTERMAN

COPYRIGHT, RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:

Jack Reid, only witness to the mysterious murder of Sir Henry Severing in the chapel of his ancient abbey, is a seer-do-well who has lived by his wits. In the chapel to steal a jeweled cross, Reid could raise no alarm at the time of the murder for fear of incriminating himself. Before Richard Selden is summoned from Scotland Yard, Reid, who has posed as an itinerant painter working at the abbey, Colonel Graham, a neighbor, and Eric Colindale, agent of the estate, trace Sir Henry's body to his father's coffin with the aid of bloodhounds. Selden and Hutchins, the local officer, interview Colindale and Reid, James, the butler, and Lady Hilda, who is in love with Colindale. Then, when they return to the man, Mrs. Thornton, the housekeeper, comes to them with information and they question her. Selden tells Hutchins he is going to London to make inquiries. Colindale talks with Reid about Lady Hilda. Reid comes upon Sylvia Lawrence, governess of the two Severing children, and she hints at frightful experiences at the abbey and he offers to help her. Then Reid talks with Selden, the detective. Selden urges Reid to communicate with Miss Lawrence and have her move her room and the children's to another part of the house, fearing for their lives. (NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 18

REID LIT the lamp in his living room and saw his painting gear laid out on the table; then he saw something else—a note. He opened it anxiously. There was no beginning, but the pencil writing was that of a woman.

Mr. Selden tells me that I ought to see you [it said]. He told me that it was important, and that you could come tonight, though I can't make out how you are going to manage it. I will look out for you in the court from my window.

Reid stared at the few lines, and stood rooted to the spot, wild thoughts careening through his head. This girl had written to him—the first note he had ever received from a woman in his life. But more than that—she had trusted him, was asking his help, and was placing her reputation in his hands.

Then a more sinister thought came. How did Selden know? If he did know that he could gain access to the house at night, did he know everything? If so, his own position was desperate, for here was clear proof that he had been in the house at the time of the murder. Prethan it was a trap, and he would find the detective waiting for him in the cellar. But if that was the case, surely Selden would not have shown his hand, but have left him to carry out his visit instead of giving him what was practically a warning.

The vision of the girl at the window the night before and the horror on her face came vividly to him, blotting out his misgivings. With a feeling of shame and foolishness, he raised the note to his lips, and then slipped it into his inner pocket.

Reid stood once again on the edge of the lake, waiting in deep thought before venturing into the water.

He knew now that the past was gone and would never return, and equally he was determined that whatever the future held for him he would never by word or deed show Sylvia that he loved her. That was quite intolerable, unthinkable. But as long as he could serve her he would do so, and commit murder cheerfully on her behalf if that were necessary.

Clouds covered the moon this time, and there was no further need of waiting. He plunged in as he was, clothed in an old suit, reckless with regard to the trail of water he would leave.

The bars of the cellar window had not been touched, and he stood shaking the water from his clothes in the damp cellar. Then he crept up the stone steps and issued from the neglected underworld of the house into the corridor, listening intently. No sound came to his ears, the place was apparently hushed in sleep.

It was dim and cold now, no moonlight came through the lancet windows. He stepped out into the dark court and saw the stained-glass windows of the chapel, where a warm glow showed faintly from the great candles that stood at the corners of the draped bier.

A shudder passed through him at the thought. Before him was the deeper blackness of the old yew tree, and he made his way into the shadow and looked round the court. Still no sound came, and the quietness was alarming, as though a hidden foe were lurking and a sudden flare of light would announce his capture. Glancing from the shadow, he saw with a catch at the heart that the window of Sylvia's bedroom, where she had appeared, was open wide to the night air. He watched the black aperture in the somber wall that meant so much to him now. A faint sound came—so faint that only the intense silence made it audible. Then in the square of blackness he saw a dim, ghostly figure, and then the face of the girl, too indistinct to show more than the mere outline. He gave a gentle "Hist!" under his breath, and the girl leant forward, craning her neck to see what was below.

"I never thought you would come."

"I am here," he whispered as loudly as he dared, and heard a sound like a sob. "Thank heaven!" she whispered back. "I am frightened."

The absurdity of trying this Romeo and Juliet business made Jack laugh softly and happily. All fear had gone now—he was enjoying the adventure like a schoolboy in an apple orchard.

"Can you climb the tree?" she whispered, cupping her hands to make the sound travel.

Reid needed no second bidding—the girl had brains as well as beauty—ridiculous to think of at that moment, but pleasing to his imagination.

To a trained athlete like Reid the ascent of the aged tree was child's play, and soon he was making his way along a branch towards the girl's window. He went as far as he dared, feeling the bough bending ominously under his weight. Pushing aside the leaves, he saw that he was on a level with Sylvia's window and only eight feet away.

She smiled as she saw his face appear, for the rusty leaves had turned him into a chimney sweep. She had her nightdress on and had thrown a shawl round her shoulders.

"I never thought you would come," she said softly. "How did you manage it?"

"I swam across the lake and got soaked," he replied, not wishing to go into details. Luckily, she was too much taken up with other matters to notice the omission of his means of entry.

"You mustn't stay," she said, incoherently.

"I want you to tell me what you know, and how I can help you."

"Mr. Reid, last night I saw a man pass along that corridor going to the chapel, and then I saw Sir Henry later on. I couldn't sleep the whole night. They tried to get the children—not the first time."

"They—who are they?" he asked, leaning forward to catch her every word.

"I don't know—it would make it so much easier if I did. There have been two attempts to steal the twins—or——" He did not catch the next words, but could guess.

"What happened?" "When I saw Sir Henry go along the passage with a candle, I went into the room where the children sleep. Their room is next to mine, and some presentiment made me bring them into my room. Then I thought that wasn't safe, and hid them in the bathroom. Poor dears, they were half asleep!"

"Shortly afterwards I heard a noise in the next room—a sort of scraping—hard to define—and someone was moving stealthily about. And then I wonder I didn't shriek, for the door of my room opened and someone or something—for it had no face—came slowly in and looked around. I pretended to be asleep and breathed heavily on purpose, but when I felt hands crawling over my face I nearly fainted. Whoever it was turned down the bedclothes to see whether the children were with me, and then I heard sounds all round the bedroom."

"I couldn't have stood it another moment—I should have cried out or jumped out of bed; but I heard a ring—a loud ring—and the sound of someone moving. Whatever it was in my room stood motionless. I saw the dark figure between my bed and the window, and then it went out hurriedly, back towards the children's room. They slept with me for the rest of the night."

"You are a brave girl," Reid said admiringly. "But why did you not speak to someone about it today?" "To whom could I go?" she cried passionately. "I might have reported the matter. I certainly would have done, but this awful murder filled all our thoughts, and I might have been telling the very person who knew something about it."

"The detective?" "How could I? He would have thought me a hysterical girl, and if there had been any inquiries I should have been dismissed—I know it—and left the children defenseless."

"But still I don't see why your story should be disbelieved," he said stoutly.

"Mr. Reid, things are too serious to mince matters. Eric Colindale has made advances to me from time to time. If I had said a word they might have done that. It was he. It wasn't—the figure was very much shorter, and the hands too small; but what chance should I have had of being believed?"

"And yet you are telling all this to me, a mere stranger?"

"I have watched you while you have been painting," she said simply, "and I can trust you."

"YOU CAN'T PRINT THAT"

THE British press, in the solemn words of the London Times, discovers it may no longer ignore "the grave constitutional issue to be raised by a conflict between the King's intentions and the advice of his Ministers." That is the backdoor approach made by England's editors to the far-flung consequences of King Edward's friendship for the American Mrs. Simpson. For weeks the international romance has occupied columns of space in American newspapers. But a self-imposed editorial censorship kept the news from the British public.

Because of that policy the menacing crisis in government found the people shaken and bewildered. Generally speaking, they were wholly unprepared for the tremendous events of the last week, the ultimatum, the conferences, the uncertainty. There had been no public intimation of Edward's affection for Mrs. Simpson until it had progressed to the point where he contemplated marriage in defiance of church, Cabinet and tradition.

Even the news of Mrs. Simpson's divorce was played down in the few newspapers that had the temerity to refer to it. But, censorship or no, church and Cabinet could not deter the King. Then came cryptic sermons, clumsily dragged into editorial comment on extraneous matters, admonishing Edward to remember his kingly duty. The increasing frequency of these veiled references in the last week by press and pulpit started a train of conflicting rumor and confusing speculation. Then the denouement.

Now, London dispatches relate, England is in turmoil. Anxious crowds fill Downing Street and throng about Buckingham Palace, shocked by rumors their popular monarch may abdicate. Yet the august Times congratulates the British press for having "so long and so wisely" ignored the "American publicity." But were the censors wise in embalmment fact? If they were, so are ostriches.

STILL TIME TO SHOP EARLY

THE Christmas season is actually here. Skeptics may be convinced simply by visiting the centre of the city. They will find the streets hung with greens and brilliantly illuminated. Stores are filled with far-sighted shoppers, also with great stocks of gifts. The Christmas spirit, in fact, is to be found everywhere.

It is pertinent, under the circumstances, to remind the shopping public that time flies and that there are only 13 shopping days before Christmas. It is also in order to call attention to the fact that all indications show that Christmas trade will be un-

SECURITY JOB CAUSES CONFLICT

WASHINGTON — Launching the selective draft during the World War was child's play compared to the brain-busting job of getting the old age pension system of the Social Security Act under way.

The monumental task heaped headaches on the Post Office and Treasury Departments as well as on the Social Security Board.

The postal service had the responsibility of distributing and collecting the 26,000,000 worker and employer blanks. The quiet efficiency and dispatch with which this huge order was filled gave no inkling of the weeks of work and midnight oil burning that went into the preparations.

With the distribution and gathering of the forms the Post Office's job was finished. But that of the Treasury and Social Security Board had just started.

They also had been wrestling for weeks with administrative details. And the deliberations between them frequently were acrid.

Nominally, control of the old age pension system is vested in the Social Security Board. But the law empowers the Treasury to collect the assessments, although the Social Security Board does the actual issuing of the pension checks.

DIVERGENT OBJECTIVES

This split administrative responsibility inevitably led to clashes. It soon developed that the Treasury and the Board approached the problem from sharply divergent points of view.

Concerned only with the collection of the payments, the Treasury wanted to keep "paper work" to a minimum. But the Board, contending that it needed full information in order to administer the law accurately and fairly, insisted on comprehensive reports.

The two agencies wrangled over the issue for weeks, getting nowhere. Finally Secretary Morgenthau broke the deadlock. He called in his subordinates, told them to give the Board its way.

"Let the Board decide what it wants done," was his edict. "Administering this law is the Board's responsibility. If we force our views on them we will get the blame if anything goes wrong."

This sound moved cleared the supercharged atmosphere. From then on the two agencies worked in better harmony.

usually brisk. This means that early shoppers will have many advantages in the way of comfortable transaction of business and the ability to make selections from undepleted stocks.

Furthermore, early shopping helps the shopkeeper and his employees, as well as the customer, and early mailing aids the burdened mailman. Things can be mailed in advance, marked "Do not open until Christmas." The more such mailings the less the final rush and the fewer the delayed deliveries.

"Do your Christmas shopping early" is the first Christmas motto to be heeded. From all appearances, Christmas shopping is getting under way at a pace that will provide plenty of company for those who do it now.

World At A Glance

—By—
Charles P. Stewart

When the British newspapers belatedly pulled the cork out of the story of the King Edward VIII-Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson romance they did it to the accompaniment of a veritable explosion. They had kept the affair bottled up so long that it was more than effervescent.

In the United States, of course, it was anything but bottled. However, it was kept hushed up at its source with such an attempt, though an unsuccessful one, at secrecy that one scarcely knew how much was fact, how much was rumor and how much was pure fiction.

A FALSE IDEA
 The British dailies, weeklies and other periodicals undoubtedly have stirred a considerable proportion of imagination into their accounts of developments.

For example one London weekly published a report that the Washington state department had expressed its opposition to a matrimonial union between Edward and Mrs. Simpson. Think of the state department as butting into such a situation!

But the English rank-and-file probably believed it implicitly.

The truth is that the London government did consult the sub-governments of the British dominions on the subject. Now the average Englishman never has quite realized that the United States is not a British dominion. Therefore, in their opinion, the United States was inadvertently included, along with Canada, Australia and cetera, among the dependencies queried by Downing street relative to the Windsor-Simpson complication.

IN ENGLAND, TOO

We have, on American newspapers, what are known as "re-write men" who produce, from fragmentary (or non-existent) dispatches, a lot of stuff that they think will interest the public, whether or not they are sure of it.

Under another name they have been in England also. From all indications they have been very busy there since a free hand has been given to them.

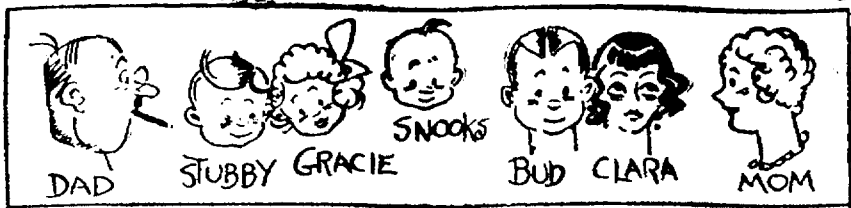

BRITISH COMPLAINT

Incidentally, many English newspapers blame the American press for creating something very like a scandal out of what, in English journalists' opinion, might have been "shushed" otherwise. They did "shush" it locally until, they complain, the American overflow inundated them.

"GLAMOROUS" OVERWORKED
 Not realizing what the Windsor-Simpson affair was developing into, I didn't begin to count, at first, the number of times that Mrs. Simpson was due to be re-

Hazards of Poisoning by Dry Cleaning Fluids

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
 FOR THOSE housewives or bachelors who do their own dry cleaning, it is wise to sound a note of warning in the winter time, when the process is so likely to occur with the window down.

The organic substances, in contrast with the familiar cleansing soap and water, that act as solvents of stains and detergents for dirt, are all capable of producing poisoning under certain circumstances.

Most of the cleaning fluids that are used for fabrics contain one or more of the following liquids: carbon tetrachloride, chloroform, trichloroethylene, ethylene dichloride, propylene dichloride, benzene, toluene, ether, alcohol and petroleum distillates of various degrees of volatility.

Effects Produced
 Aside from the fire hazard involved, these substances, when inhaled, can produce several effects. Naturally, as might be expected from solvents of grease, they have the effect of removing oil from the skin, causing it to become chafed and cracked, particularly around the finger nails. Gasoline containing tetra-ethyl lead can produce lead poisoning by absorption through the skin.

The inhalation of fumes of many of these substances will affect the lungs, sometimes the kidneys, liver and nervous system.

Another hazard is the possibility of children swallowing some of the fluid if a bottle is left within their reach. I have before me a report of 65 cases of kerosene poisoning in children admitted to one hospital within two years.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS

M. J.: "I am very much annoyed by the excessive perspiration of the palms of my hands."

Answer: This does not indicate any special disease, but simply a nervous vasomotor trouble. At times it can be relieved by soaking the hands in a solution of a teaspoon of formalin to a quart of water, morning and evening, for three or four minutes.

F. C. R.: "I have a bad habit of biting my finger nails and my finger nails are very brittle, thin and pliable. They chip easily and splinter, especially at the corners."

Answer: Possibly your trouble is due to a chronic infection of the nail bed. These troubles are frequently relieved by the use of the X-ray, and other means which are routine problems in the office of any physician.

M. M.: "Will you please tell me whether it is harmful to sleep in a room that has no cellar under it? The room is warm and dry, and has four windows."

Answer: It is perfectly healthful to sleep in such a room.

The clocks are chiming in my heart
 Their cobweb chime;
 Old murmurings of days that die,
 The sob of things a-drifting by,
 The clocks are chiming in my heart!

 Those ahy fires, that flamed anon,

would announce his capture. Glancing from the shadow, he saw with a catch at the heart that the window of Sylvia's bedroom, where she had appeared, was open wide to the night air. He watched the black aperture in the somber wall that meant so much to him now. A faint sound came—so faint that only the intense silence made it audible. Then in the square of blackness he saw a dim ghostly figure, and then the face of the girl, too indistinct to show more than the mere outline. He gave a gentle "Hist!" under his breath, and the girl leant forward, craning her neck to see what was below.

COLORS IN CLOTHES AND COSMETICS SHOULD BE CAREFULLY CHOSEN

By GLADYS GLAD
"America's Most Famous Beauty"
IT IS MY BELIEF that if you scratch the surface of virtually any woman's mind, you'll find there a definite craving for beauty. But if you scratch a little deeper, you're likely to find in some cases, that many women haven't the faintest idea of how to acquire that complete loveliness that they so desire.

Take the bleached blonde, for instance. As I told you recently, if she takes proper care of her hair, she really can make it a gleaming halo of beauty. But she, like the red, gray and black-haired types, must be careful of her colors, too.

When the hair is bleached, then, the face is given a foreign background, and often it is a background that doesn't harmonize with the general coloring of the face at all. As a result, when a girl bleaches her hair from a dark to a lighter hue, certain changes are usually required in the shades of the makeup she uses.

Natural Coloring Is Aim
The bleached blonde should strive to attain, through her make-up, the usual facial coloring that the natural blonde possesses. Her facial coloring should be softer and more in harmony with the delicate shade of her hair. And she should, therefore, avoid heavy, vivid make-up, for such makeup may give her a hard, artificial appearance.

In lipstick and rouge, it is best for the bleached blonde to stick to warm, reddish hues with yellowing in the Masonic Hall. The newly elected officers were in charge.

Ritualistic practice was announced for next Tuesday evening.

During the business session the committees for the ensuing year were announced. The social club officers were elected after the regular business meeting.

These committees will be announced later.

Yo-Yo Sewing Club

The Yo-Yo Sewing club met at the home of Mrs. Iley Greeno, S. Pickaway street, Tuesday evening, at 7:30 o'clock.

A pleasant evening was spent in visiting and sewing. The hostess served refreshments at the conclusion of the evening.

The next meeting, a Christmas party, will be held at the home of Mrs. C. O. Kerns, W. Union street, Tuesday, December 22, at 7:30 o'clock.

Contract Bridge

Mrs. B. K. Clapp, S. Scioto street, entertained her contract bridge club at her home Tuesday evening. Mrs. O. D. Mader received high score prize.

Two guests, Mrs. Charles Mason and Mrs. H. P. Folsom, were invited for the evening.

Ladies Aid Society

The Emmitt's Chapel Ladies Aid society will meet at the home of Mrs. Harrison Wolfe, Pickaway township, Wednesday, January 6, at 2 o'clock, with Mrs. Russell Wolfe, Mrs. John A. Wilson, and Miss Ethel Roberts, assisting.

Birthday Surprise

Several friends called at the home of Mrs. Frank Beck, Northridge road, Tuesday evening, and surprised her with an informal party, planned in honor of her birthday anniversary.

Light refreshments were served late in the evening.

Von Bora Society

The Von Bora society of the Trinity Lutheran church will hold the regular meeting and Christmas party, Monday evening, December 14, at 6:30, in the Parish House.

All members expecting to attend this meeting will notify Mrs. John Walters.

A Christmas program and an exchange of ten cent gifts, is planned for the evening. Mrs. Edward Schreiner will be chairman.

You-Go I-Go Sewing club

Miss Anna Kirkwood, N. Scioto street, was hostess to the members of the You-Go I-Go sewing club Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, at her home, with fourteen members and two guests present. The afternoon was spent in various handy-work, and social chat.

This was the Christmas social session, and a covered dish dinner brought by the members, was served at 6:30 o'clock. Two guests, Jean Theobald, and Mrs. Thomas Stofor partook of the hospitality. Mrs. William Theobald, and Mrs. Henry Purcell, Washington C. H., former residents of Circleville, and ish overtones, for these are the reds and yellows of vibrant youth. The purplish reds are far too deep in tone, and too aging. The bleached blonde's powder should be light in tone, but should have a creamy, shell cast.

Her eye makeup should be given a great deal of thought. Her eye-shadow should match or harmonize with the color of her eyes.

But she should avoid using black mascara and eyebrow pencil, for they will tend to give her face a harsh appearance. Brown shades of mascara and eyebrow pencil are softer, and are much more effective for use by bleached blondes.

Colors for Gowns
The colors in gowning that the blonde type adopts are also most important, since they form the background for her hair. The golden-haired blonde, whether artificial or natural, should avoid vivid, bright colors. For the transparent skinned, delicately colored girl of this type, orchid, pinkish beige, black, cool blues and greens pastels and medium shades that have flattering overtones are best, for such colors give a most becoming glow to her delicately tinted skin, and also set off golden blonde hair most beautifully.

The ash blonde and the platinum blonde demand an altogether different color scheme from the golden blonde, however. The real platinum blonde and the ash blonde of the Ann Harding type, usually possess skin that is fair with a slightly rosy hue. And for such girls, scarlet is somewhat daring but most becoming, as are black, pearl gray, purple, silver violet, white and crimson. Deep, midnight blues also help to set off platinum and ash blonde hair most attractively.

Members of the club, were in attendance.

Mrs. Eva Dresbach will entertain the club at the January meeting.

Bridge Club

Mrs. C. G. Chalfin, E. Main street, was hostess to the members of her two table contract bridge club at her home Monday evening.

The traveling and first prizes were won by Mrs. Walter Denman, E. Union street, second by Miss Nelle Anderson, and the third by Mrs. Charles Owens.

At the conclusion of the game, light refreshments were served by the hostess. Mrs. Mary Morris will entertain the club in one week at her home in Watt street.

Grange Meeting

The regular meeting of Logan Elm Grange will be held at Pickaway township school house Tuesday, December 15, at 6:30 o'clock.

A covered dish dinner will be held in connection with the meeting, and each family is requested to take its own table service. Following the dinner, a Christmas program will be given.

All members of the grange, including juvenile grangers, are asked to take a ten cent gift, for the gift exchange.

College Cyclists Worry Town

OBERLIN, O. (UP)—Bicycle riding, for decades a hobby for which Oberlin College students have been widely publicized, has increased recently to such extent that one civic group is suggesting licensing of all cyclists. The group believes this would make possible enforcement of a regulation requiring lights on cycles at nights.

MARIAN MARTIN PATTERN

PATTERN 9110

You'll make a hit wherever you go in this dashing trim-line frock! Who can resist the eye-filling appeal of its sprightly puffed sleeves, setting off a beautifully simple bodice and notch-effect yoke? You may be sure that Marian Martin knows all the flattering "tricks" of the trade, so, for a gay bit of chic, she's placed four nobby buttons right down the front. And see how cleverly they point up that striking Eton collar! Simply made, is Pattern 9110 — and aided by its accompanying Complete Diagrammed Sew Chart, you'll find it easy fun to stitch up. Any number of inexpensive fabrics will add to the stunning effect of this up-to-the-minute pattern; heavy sheer crepe, for one! But don't forget the "dresy" woolsens—of which you're sure to like challis, or wool crepe. Velvet is smart, too!

Pattern 9110 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 2 1/2 yards 54 inch fabric.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for EACH MARIAN MARTIN pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and STYLE NUMBER.

BE SURE TO STATE SIZE Be sure to order the NEW ISSUE OF OUR MARIAN MARTIN PATTERN BOOK! Be the first to wear the latest Fall models that it shows—for home, business, shopping, sports, parties. See the thrilling pages of special slenderizing designs... the clever models for children, growing girls, debs... the latest fabrics and costume accessories. BOOK FIFTEEN CENTS. PIRATES REMAIN AS ONLY TEAM INTERESTED IN OBTAINING DIZZY DEAN

DEAL BELIEVED OFF AS TRAYNOR RETAINS VAUGHN

Waner and Blanton Offered, Baseball World Believes, for Eccentric Star

RICKEY PUT ON SPOT

Reasons for Putting Ace on Block Many and Various

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—(UP)—The St. Louis Cardinals, for some reason, do not want Dizzy Dean. They are trying desperately to trade him and the market has dwindled to one club, the Pittsburgh Pirates. The rest of the bidders have folded up—They don't want Dizzy at any price. The Pirates have trimmed down their original offer to almost half what it was and it is on a take-it-or-leave-it basis. In other words, it's up to the Cardinals whether they want to get rid of Dean or keep him.

Traynor Speaks

"We'll take Dizzy all right but not at their price unless they guarantee we'll have no headaches. They can't guarantee that so it looks like the deal is off."

Another reason why it looks like the deal is off is because the Pirates have withdrawn Arky Vaughan from all negotiations. William Benawanger, Pittsburgh president, said: "I wouldn't trade Vaughan even for Dean."

A couple of weeks ago the Pirates would have traded Vaughan, others and cash. Now the Pirates have offered a "good pitcher and a good outfielder, believed to be Paul Waner and Cy Blanton. That's all. It's up to the Cards to accept or reject. If they turn it down, then Dean stays with the Cards. Rickey and Sam Breadon are cornering each other and whispering into each other's ears. Rickey brought a stooge along with him to keep newshawks from overhearing his private conferences in public with Breadon. Rickey should have brought someone along to tell him what they're saying about the Cards' attempt to peddle Dean.

Roughly the general idea to that the Cardinals are trying to get rid of a player they don't want and wreck another pennant contender in the bargain. The Cards might have carried out their plan a few days ago but they were greedy and demanded too much.

And all they'll have to do is sign him. And Dizzy, whatever's wrong with him, will be smart like a fox and walk into Mr. Rickey's office and quote Mr. Rickey: "Any club that gets Dizzy will win the pennant by ten games."

Outdrawn By Doggers

Many stories are going around about what's wrong with Dizzy. Probably most of them are untrue. But they're saying he's 31 years old. That he can't be handled. That his arm is dead. That his salary is too big for the Cardinals to carry (and there's some logic to this in view of the fact that Brooklyn outdraw the Cardinals at home last season). That he plans to quit baseball in two more years.

DEAN IRRITATED BY PHIL WRIGLEY, OWNER OF CUBS

SARASOTA, Fla., Dec. 9.—(UP)—Dizzy Dean said he was mad today. And he vowed that his anger would make it tough for the Chicago Cubs next summer.

Dean was irritated primarily at Owner Phil Wrigley on hearing that he didn't want Diz.

"He may not want me but he'll sing a different tune when his boys start swinging at my fast one," said the great one. "Just tell him that, will you?"

Dean was noncommittal about prospects of leaving the Cardinals. Meanwhile he played golf.

Braddock May Be Louis Victim

By BILL BRAUCHER
NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—"I knew what I wanted to do but I couldn't do it."

Jack Dempsey said it through swollen lips as he stumbled from the rain-soaked Sesquicentennial stadium in Philadelphia, that night 10 years ago.

Will Jimmy Braddock say it, too?

He can't miss. So devastating is the damage wrought by inactivity that I believe Jim's next fight will be his last, whether it is Joe Louis he meets in Atlantic City, in February, or Max Schmeling in the coming summer.

Life of Leisure

Braddock was a tiger when he beat Max Baer, and he fought with all of the hungry animal's savagery. He had been fighting, working on the wharves, he was as hard as nails, his fists were like belying pins, his timing was excellent, he was fit.

That was a year and a half ago, in the summer of 1935. That was a magic night. Released from the throttling hand of poverty, Braddock was thrust suddenly into a life of ease and luxury such as he never had known. One day a lean, hard and hungry dock wallop; twenty-four hours later a champion assured of a million dollars in earnings.

Banquets. Radio appearances. Irregular hours. Long train rides. Plenty of good food. No worries.

And no fights!

No fights—there's the rub.

Jack Dempsey was a pretty good fighter, too. But the same sort of life Braddock has been leading, the same fare of food without fights made an old woman of the Man Mauled who took a lacing that night in the rain.

Arms, Legs Go

The man mauler, one of the most terrific hitters the ring ever has seen, fought that night like a grade schoolboy against a seasoned professional. Whenever he led he was late, and instead of giving he took. Arms and elbows wouldn't come up in time to catch those swishing Tunney punches. Footwork? When he tried to dance around

Tunney he tripped over his own feet.

Braddock won't be meeting a Tunney if he is matched with Joe Louis in Altantic City on February. Louis has weaknesses that Tunney didn't have—above the shoulders. But Louis carries a stick of dynamite that Tunney didn't have, either, and he carries it in both hands.

It is also true that Braddock never has been a Dempsey. After all, the fact is that Braddock is a good club fighter who drove to the championship with the help of determination, courage and Max Baer's palpable weaknesses.

But What a Foe!

Now, after being a stranger to the ring and surrounded by unaccustomed luxury for more than a year and a half, he is about to step in against one of the deadliest hitters the ring has known, a young, sinewy giant who has kept himself in fighting trim the only way a fighting man can keep in trim—by fighting.

From this corner it appears Braddock is preparing to have himself quickly knocked out.

ARONSON LISTS PRINCIPALS FOR MONDAY'S SHOW

Leo Jenson Meets Babe Caddock as Feature of Mixed Card

Norman Aronson, matchmaker for the Circleville Athletic club, today announced his card for next Monday evening's show.

Three bouts will star wrestlers, while the fourth will put two youthful pugilists, Eddie Bird, colored, and Shirley Hulse, Jackson township youngsters. Bird weighs 121 and Hulse, star of last winter's series, 128.

The grunTERS will include: Leo Jenson, 190, of Denmark, against Babe Caddock, 190, of Tampa in the main-go.

Jack Bernard, 180, of Boston, against Frank Hill, 177, of Carbondale, Ill.

George Bernard, 168, of Boston, Mass., against Bob Blake, 170, of Columbus.

72 'EXPERIMENT' BUNNIES PLACED ON COUNTY FARM

Seventy-two bunnies were released Tuesday afternoon by Fred Harlowe, district conservation commissioner, and Clarence Francis, local game officer, on the game refuge on the Harry Montellus farm Kingston pike.

A tiny metal tag was placed on the ear of each rabbit. Any hunter shooting one of the tagged rabbits is requested to return the tag to H. E. Betz, president of the local sportsmen's organization, or Mr. Francis. The purpose of the tags is to study the migration of the rabbits.

Hunting is prohibited on the game refuge.

LACK OF CROWD CAUSES DELAY FOR SPORTSMEN

Lack of a crowd caused a postponement of the meeting of the Pickaway County Farmers' and Sportsman's association Tuesday night the Elks home. No date was set for the next meeting.

Residents of the South Bloomfield district will meet in the school house Thursday at 8 p. m. to make plans for a fox drive, Saturday, Dec. 26.

The territory to be covered will be about three miles wide and five miles long. Foxes are numerous in the territory.

AT THE CLIFTONA

An actor who can sing or a singer who can act, especially one who has the physique to play a rough and ready role such as is required in "Captain Calamity." Grand National's gorgeous all-color adventure picture of the South Seas, which opens at the Cliftona theatre tonight, is not easy to find. But George Houston, who was for years a favorite in Broadway stage and operatic productions, and who has the title role in "Captain Calamity," co-starred with the lovely Marian Nixon, has these qualities in a supreme degree.

"Come Closer, Folks," featuring James Dunn, is the other half of this double bill.

AT THE CIRCLE

Paul Robeson, heard in concerts here and abroad, never sang under such trying, exhausting conditions as for the thrilling chain gang scene in "Emperor Jones." United Artists' picturization of Eugene O'Neill's famous play current at the Circle theatre tonight and Thursday.

The chain gang scene was staged in a real stone quarry on a blazing hot Summer's day. Robeson, as Brutus Jones, sings "Water Boy" in this scene. He had to swing a huge iron hammer against the rocks with every beat of his song. The formation of the quarry, with high cliffs on three sides reflecting the sun, generated a temperature reminiscent of Death Valley, and Robeson had to break rocks and sing all morning and most of the afternoon.

When that was finished, he had to make his escape running and climbing among the rocks, with his legs shackled by a heavy iron chain. Chains once used in a prison gang were obtained for the picture.

AT THE GRAND

Now that Olivia de Havilland has reached the featured billing stage in her brief but sensational screen career, exhibitors have begun to worry over the length of her name.

Several theatre managers who plan to play the Warner Bros. picture, "Anthony Adverse," at the Grand theatre and in which Olivia has the leading feminine role, have written to the young actress asking for her suggestions as to how best they can shorten her name for marquee purposes.

Outdriven By Dodgers

Many stories are going around about what's wrong with Dizzy. Probably most of them are untrue. But they're saying he's 31 years old. That he can't be handled. That his arm is dead. That his salary is too big for the Cardinals to carry (and there's some logic to this in view of the fact that Brooklyn outdrew the Cardinals at home last season). That he plans to quit baseball in two more years.

DEAN IRRITATED BY PHIL WRIGLEY, OWNER OF CUBS

SARASOTA, Fla., Dec. 9. — (UP) — Dizzy Dean said he was mad to-day. And he vowed that his anger would make it tough for the Chicago Cubs next summer.

Dean was irritated primarily at Owner Phil Wrigley on hearing that he didn't want him.

"He may not want me but he'll sing a different tune when his boys start swinging at my fast one," said the great one. "Just tell him that, will you?"

Dean was noncommittal about prospects of leaving the Cardinals. Meanwhile he played golf.

PETTIT RETURNS WITH FINE DEER AFTER HUNTING

Guy Pettit returned from Potter county, Pa., Monday night with a six-point deer.

It was displayed Tuesday in front of his business establishment on S. Court street.

Ed Helwigen and Roy Reily are on a hunting trip in Pennsylvania at the present time.

Braddock May Be Louis Victim

By BILL BRAUCHER
NEW YORK, Dec. 9. — "I knew what I wanted to do but I couldn't do it."

Jack Dempsey said it through swollen lips as he stumbled from the rain-soaked Sesqui-centennial stadium in Philadelphia, that night 10 years ago.

Will Jimmy Braddock say it, too?

He can't miss. So devastating is the damage wrought by inactivity that I believe Jim's next fight will be his last, whether it is Joe Louis he meets in Atlantic City, in February, or Max Schmeling in the coming summer.

Life of Leisure
Braddock was a tiger when he beat Max Baer, and he fought with all of the hungry animal's savagery. He had been fighting, working on the wharves, he was as hard as nails, his fists were like belaying pins, his timing was excellent, he was fit.

That was a year and a half ago, in the summer of 1935. That was a magic night. Released from the throttling hand of poverty,

Braddock was a tiger when he beat Max Baer, and he fought with all of the hungry animal's savagery. He had been fighting, working on the wharves, he was as hard as nails, his fists were like belaying pins, his timing was excellent, he was fit.

Arms, Legs Go
The man mauler, one of the most terrific hitters the ring ever has seen, fought that night like a grade schoolboy against a seasoned professional. When he led he was late, and instead of giving he took. Arms and elbows wouldn't come up in time to catch those swishing Tunney punches. Footwork? When he tried to dance around erty, Braddock was thrust suddenly into a life of ease and luxury such as he never had known. One day a lean, hard, hungry dock wallop; twenty-four hours later a champion assured of a million dollars in earnings.

Banquets. Radio appearances. Irregular hours. Long train rides. Plenty of good food. No worries.

No fights—there's the rub. Jack Dempsey was a pretty good fighter, too. But the same sort of life Braddock has been leading, the same fare of food without fights made an old man of the Man Mauler who took a lacing that night in the rain.

Now, after being a stranger to the ring and surrounded by unaccustomed luxury for more than a year and a half, he is about to step in against one of the deadliest hitters the ring has known, a young, sinewy giant who has kept himself in fighting trim the only way a fighting man can keep in trim—by fighting.

From this corner it appears Braddock is preparing to have himself quickly knocked out.

But What a Foe!
Tunney he tripped over his own feet.

Braddock won't be meeting a Tunney if he is matched with Joe Louis in Atlantic City on February. Louis has weaknesses that Tunney didn't have—above the shoulders. But Louis carries a stick of dynamite that Tunney didn't have, either, and he carries it in both hands.

It is also true that Braddock never has been a Dempsey. After all, the fact is that Braddock is a good club fighter who drove to the championship with the help of determination, courage and Max Baer's palpable weaknesses.

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA
An actor who can sing or a singer who can act, especially one who has the physique to play a rough and ready role such as is required in "Captain Calamity," Grand National's gorgeous all-color adventure picture of the South Seas, which opens at the Cliftona theatre tonight, is not easy to find.

But George Houston, who has been for years a favorite in Broadway stage and operatic productions, and who has the title role in "Captain Calamity," co-starred with the lovely Marian Nixon, who these qualities in a supreme degree.

"Come Closer, Folks," featuring James Dunn, is the other half of this double bill.

AT THE CIRCLE
Paul Robeson, heard in concerts here and abroad, never sang under such trying, exhausting conditions as for the thrilling chain gang scene in "Emperor Jones," United Artists' picturization of Eugene O'Neill's famous play current at the Circle theatre tonight and Thursday.

The chain gang scene was staged in a real stone quarry on a blazing hot summer's day. Robeson, as Brutus Jones, sings "Water Boy" in this scene. He had to swing a huge iron hammer against the rocks with every beat of his song. The formation of the quarry, with high cliffs on three sides reflecting the sun, generated a temperature reminiscent of Death Valley, and Robeson had to break rocks and sing all morning and most of the afternoon.

When that was finished, he had to make his escape running and climbing among the rocks, with his legs shackled by a heavy iron chain. Chains once used in a prison gang were obtained for the picture.

AT THE GRAND
Now that Olivia de Havilland has reached the featured billing stage in her brief but sensational screen career, exhibitors have begun to worry over the length of her name.

Several theatre managers who plan to play the Warner Bros. picture, "Anthony Adverse," at the Grand theatre and in which Olivia has the leading feminine role, have written to the young actress asking for her suggestions as to how best they can shorten her name for marquee purposes.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

BIDDING A GRAND SLAM

BIDDING grand slams is dangerous work. Usually the call is made more on guess than certainty. Many a grand slam bid that way can be defeated by the best opening lead, were the cards to be played double-dummy. The fact that so many grand slam contracts go game is due to the declarer's advantage in playing both hands. Here, however, is a case of a grand slam that is air tight, bid with feature showing, by players who thoroughly understood what they were about.

Bidding went: West, 1-Heart; East, 2-Spades, to show game probabilities, and slam possibilities, in case holdings fitted; West, 3-Spades, to request partner to show features, if he so desired; East, 4-Diamonds, thereby showing his lowest side Ace; West, 5-Clubs, to show lowest side Ace; East, 5-Diamonds, to show the K, having first shown the Ace. He would have shown the Ace of hearts, had he held it. His next choice would have been the K of clubs, had he held that lower ranking K. He could not bid 5-Spades.

without signing off. West could see no minor suit losers. The 2-Spades call from partner should mean at least 6 spades to Q or 5 spades with more honors. Partner could not well hold more than 3 hearts, the way he was bidding, so West clearly visioned 12 safe tricks at least, so he bid 6-Spades. East felt that if partner could jump into a small slam after learning that East held a 2-Spade overcall of 1-Heart, and the side A-K of diamonds, there should be a grand slam with so many spade honors and a single heart, so he bid 7-Spades, as only a business risk. He could not imagine West bidding the small slam without the A-K of hearts and more than two diamonds, unless he held the Q of that suit to three. Also he could not have more than two clubs, unless he held the unshown Q. It was splendid card reading.

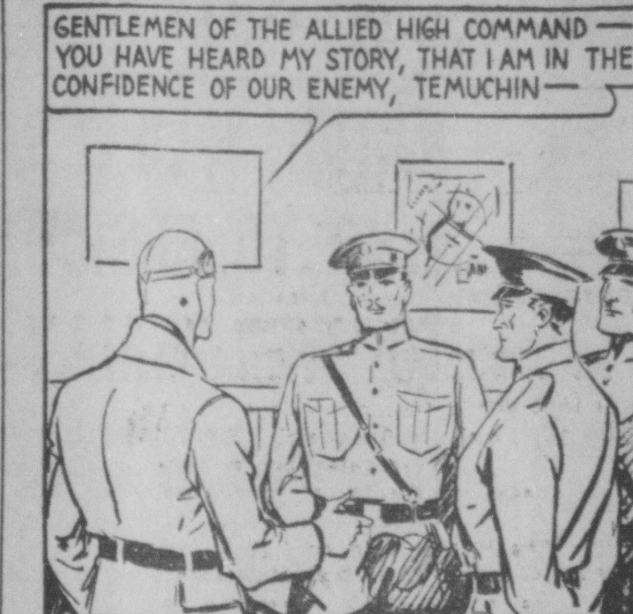

East displayed admirable caution in playing the hand. The opening lead was the 2 of hearts. Dummy's K won. The 3 of spades was led, and won with the 10. When the 8 fell it marked two more trumps in the North hand, in all probability. The Ace and K of clubs were taken. Declarer discarded a club on a lead of dummy's Ace of hearts. A diamond put declarer in with his K. Dummy's ruffed declarer's last club, with the 9 of spades. A diamond put declarer in with his Ace. Dummy's K of spades was used to ruff declarer's last diamond, leaving declarer nothing but four top spades. Dummy's last trump was led and declarer ran off his last four tricks for a grand slam.

Bidding went: West, 1-Heart; East, 2-Spades, to show game probabilities, and slam possibilities, in case holdings fitted; West, 3-Spades, to request partner to show features, if he so desired; East, 4-Diamonds, thereby showing his lowest side Ace; West, 5-Clubs, to show lowest side Ace; East, 5-Diamonds, to show the K, having first shown the Ace. He would have shown the Ace of hearts, had he held it. His next choice would have been the K of clubs, had he held that lower rank in K. He could not bid 5-Spades.

without signing off. West could see no minor suit losers. The 2-Spades call from partner should mean at least 6 spades to A-Q or 5 spades with more honors. Partner could not well hold more than 3 hearts, the way he was bidding, so West clearly visioned 12 safe tricks at least, so he bid 6-Spades. East felt that if partner could jump into a small slam after learning that East held a 2-Spade overcall of 1-Heart, and the side A-K of diamonds, there should be a grand slam with so many spade honors and a single heart, so he bid 7-Spades, as only a business risk. He could not imagine West bidding the small slam without the A-K of hearts and more than two diamonds, unless he held the Q of that suit to three. Also he could not have more than two clubs, unless he held the unshown Q. It was splendid card reading.

East displayed admirable caution in playing the hand. The opening lead was the 2 of hearts. Dummy's K won. The 3 of spades was led, and won with the 10. When the 8 fell it marked two more trumps in the North hand, in all probability. The Ace and K of clubs were taken. Declarer discarded a club on a lead of dummy's Ace of hearts. A diamond put declarer in with his K. Dummy ruffed declarer's last club, with the 9 of spades. A diamond put declarer's last diamond, leaving declarer nothing but four top spades. Dummy's last trump was led and declarer ran off his last four tricks for a grand slam.

J. I. Smith Jr., to Preside at Dinner Gathering Set For 6:30

EXECUTIVES TO ATTEND Further Development of District on Schedule

James I. Smith, Jr., chairman of the Pickaway District, Boy Scouts of America, announced today that the district committee would meet next Monday evening, December 14, at 6:30 at the New American Hotel.

The district committee is composed of representatives from the troop committees of the various Boy Scout troops in Circleville and Pickaway county, and several members-at-large who are business and civic leaders interested in the youth of their communities.

To Be Dinner Meeting

Next week's meeting will be the first since the reorganization held a few weeks ago when officials were elected. For the convenience of the men involved and in order to conserve their time, Smith declared that the affair would be a dinner meeting, thus leaving the evening free for other engagements. Both Robert H. Heistand, executive of the Central Ohio Area council, and Howard Kautz, field executive and assistant to Heistand, will attend the meeting.

Business for the evening will consist of further development of the district organization and discussion on the procedure for maintaining and extending the scout movement throughout the county. Both Smith and Reed Shafer, vice-chairman of the district, urge all local and out-of-town scouts to be present.

ONE MINUTE PULPIT

A scorpion seeketh wisdom, and findeth it not; but knowledge is easy unto him that understandeth.—Proverbs, 14:6.

W. M. Reid, E. Union street, who has been critically ill the last few days, is slightly improved.

The fire department answered a call on E. Main street near Court Tuesday afternoon where an auto caught fire. The fire was extinguished before it arrived. There was no damage. The name of the owner was not learned.

Pickaway county, Wednesday received $1,363 from state-federal sources for blind relief under the Social Security program the July 21 to Sept. 30 quarter.

The Epsilon Mu Sigma group of the high school put on a play as the assembly program Wednesday morning.

Edward Schleich, of near Williamsport, was discharged from Berger hospital Tuesday. He was treated for undulant fever.

A daughter was born Wednesday morning to Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Brooks, 415 E. Mound Street.

Ed Strawser, of Elm avenue, was returned to Berger hospital Tuesday for treatment for an arm injury.

A son was born Wednesday morning to Mr. and Mrs. Alva Barr, of near Dutch Hollow.

Observers said Hautzmayr apparently lost the horizon and failed to rise quickly enough. He scraped off one roof on the other side of the airport, cut a telephone pole half in two and struck head on into a house on the opposite side of the road.

One wing of the airplane was shorn off by the telephone pole and dropped in Hillcrest road. The rest of the plane was buried in the wreckage of the house.

Flaming gasoline set three houses on fire.

No Americans Abroad Most of the passengers were German, Dutch or Scandinavians, with several British subjects. No Americans were on board.

The most prominent was De La Cierva, world famous for the invention of the autogiro, the "flying windmill." He was technical director of the Cierva Autogiro company with world headquarters here.

De La Cierva was 39 years old. He was a sportsman and a friend of former King Alfonso. As a youth he served in the Spanish cortes but that bored him and he began studying aviation.

The crash of an airplane in Madrid in 1920 had first interested him in aviation and he resolved to build a "safe" airplane.

The result of his experiments was the autogiro which was described as being "able to shoot through the air like a bullet, take off from the roof of a barn, land like a humming bird, and be stowed away in an ordinary garage."

Flew Channel in 1928 He flew the English channel in the "queer contraption" in 1928 and immediately won world-wide acclaim. Since, his planes have been manufactured and sold everywhere.

De La Cierva never traveled on ordinary airplanes except under the most pressing circumstances. He is survived by four children.

NATION BELIEVES KING TO RESIGN TO WED WALLY

Baldwin's Expected Speech, Telling of Decision, to be Heard Thursday

"I can assure him that has not escaped me."

Members of the royal family, and particularly Queen Mary, were understood to be profoundly downcast in the belief that there was no more hope that King Edward would remain on his throne.

Aside from the rise and fall of hope at intervals during the emergency, the real feeling was expressed clearly and with restraint today in the Morning Post, an ultra-conservative and court newspaper.

May Be Compelled

"There is a feeling in parliamentary circles that the king may ultimately feel himself compelled to abdicate," said the Post. "Preparations for the distressing contingency of his abdication are being made as a precautionary measure. Significance is attached to this in connection with the presence at No. 10 Downing street yesterday of Sir Eric Merville (secretary to the Duke of York) and Sir Edward Peacock, (receiving general of the duchy of Cornwall from which the king derives rich revenues.)"

There have been waves of hope due to several pleas by members of the government and the royal family that the king keep his throne, by the offer of the king's men led by Winston Churchill to fight for him, by Mrs. Simpson's statement offering to "withdraw."

Prime Minister Baldwin is believed to have sensed from the start that the king was going to abdicate, and to have delayed announcement so long only in hope that some miracle the situation might be altered, and, secondly, because he did not want anybody to accuse him of trying to hurry the king.

FAYETTE COUNTY CONTINUES PROBE OF MAN'S DEATH

WASHINGTON C. H., Dec. 9.—No arrests have been made in the investigation of the killing of Rufus W. Hutson, 79, in his farm home at Manara late Saturday night. Private funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon.

On two occasions Mrs. Maggie Finney, 58, housekeeper for the aged farmer, has "gone into a trance" to inform officers where to find missing objects about the house.

The farmer's body, with battered head, was found in the bed at his home by Mrs. Finney and Henry Shoemaker, young farm tenant, early Sunday.

she killed Miss Giltner, and fled to her own home.

Miss Giltner's 14-year-old brother heard the shots. He ran into the room, found his sister face down on the floor, her right hand still clutching her pen. He thought she had fainted and so reported to his mother. They tried for a few minutes to revive her, then turned her over, revealing her chest wounds.

Miss Morgan did not stay at her home. She told the housekeeper she was going to Portland, Mich. She drove to Battle Creek, Kalamazoo, and Portland where she picked up John McClellan, a friend, returned to East Lansing where she dropped him, and then went to the home of Stephen V. Klem, near the Morgan and Giltner homes, where she was arrested by Donald Bremer, chief of state college police, and Sergeant Joseph M. Sheridan, of the state police. Miss Morgan stepped out, said calmly:

"Here I am. You may take me." Miss Giltner is the youngest of the three daughters of Dean W.

C. Giltner of the veterinary department of Michigan State college. She and Miss Morgan were childhood playmates, went to high school together, were room mates at Michigan State.

she killed Miss Giltner, and fled to her own home.

Miss Giltner's 14-year-old brother heard the shots. He ran into the room, found his sister face down on the floor, her right hand still clutching her pen. He thought she had fainted and so reported to his mother. They tried for a few minutes to revive her, then turned her over, revealing her chest wounds.

Miss Morgan did not stay at her home. She told the housekeeper she was going to Portland, Mich. She drove to Battle Creek, Kalamazoo, and Portland where she picked up John McClellan, a friend, returned to East Lansing
